GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH IN THE MANCHESTER TOWNSHIP LIBRARY

Contributed by Rosalyn Breitenwischer, Manchester, Michigan

The Bentley! The Burton! Fort Wayne! The Library of Michigan!

So the mind of the family historian perpetually envisions brief case primed for travel to such libraries of genealogical manna. But, if the ancestor lived rurally what about the small local public library serving the area? Can it hold much of genealogical significance?

In the case of the Manchester Township Library, the answer is "yes." For there one may find a more personal, intimate view of an ancestor than is found through federal censuses or immigration lists. As the oldest township library in the State of Michigan, this 153 year old institution in southwestern Washtenaw County is a tale in history itself. Specifically for the genealogist, the Library's historical room houses materials documenting a people of the past, revealing them within the context of their community. Settle down with briefcase there and, through various source materials, follow the ancestors, quickened with life as they traverse their world of yesteryear.

Start by reading the micro-edition of the Manchester Enterprise, dating back to October 1867. Mat Blosser remarkably edited and published this weekly newspaper during its first 72 years. Through reporting the everyday comings and goings of a people he knew well, he has left family historians a veritable diary of ancestral information.

Move on to the 1833 and 1837 maps of the Village of Manchester enhancing a map collection which includes 1874, 1895, and 1915 atlases of Washtenaw County. These aid the genealogist, armed with village lot and area farm land descriptions, to visually pinpoint the geographical locations of ancestral property.

Then to the vertical file. The holdings here captivate one's interest for hours. Pictures, some thankfully having identification on the reverse, capture individuals, societies, and scenes from more than a century ago. These offer the genealogist a visual glimpse of that early ancestor and of the community as he saw it.

Files on area congregations of the Christian faith contain anniversary programs and booklets offering insight into family church affiliations. One, for a 50th anniversary observance in 1917, is published in the German language, thus reflecting a people staunchly beholden to the mother tongue.

Individual family surname files contain clippings and pictures from those units who collectively have given the sense of community to the area through the years.

Browse through the records of local social and fraternal groups, businesses, and justice of the peace papers from the late 19th and early 20th centuries. School and their alumni records abound. Scrapbooks covering the early to mid-20th century are donated to the Library from estates of private collections. And a recent addition to the Library is the Oak Grove Cemetery Association lot ownership records of this century. All these provide interesting reading with that all important possible mention of the family forebear.

Early evening shadows falling across the village green outside signal that time has come to end the journey here. Traveling home with briefcase perched aside, pause to reflect on those notes of interest newly jotted down. Consider that uncle who was such a respected businessman, or that great-aunt who surprisingly moved to Indiana for awhile, or that cousin who left for New York City, and subsequently, of all things, performed in the entertainment field.

Yes, the small local public library can be a valuable aid in giving shape and form to an ancestor who would otherwise be just a name with dates.

BOOK REVIEW

By Nancy J. Van Blaricum, Dexter, Michigan

The Vedder Families in America, 1657-1985, Edwin Henry Vedder. Privately published, 1987. This book of 476 pages plus three indexes was donated to the Genealogical Society of Washtenaw County by the author, 11 Riverpoint Village, Clemson, South Carolina 29631.

Edwin Henry Vedder was born in Augusta Township, Washtenaw County, Michigan, the son of Nathan Lee Vedder and Alice Calista Palmer. Nathan Lee Vedder was the son of Henry Vedder and Esther A. Marlatt who married in Adrian, Michigan. Henry was the son of Philip Vedder and Mary Bover. Philip and Mary Vedder settled near Milan in Augusta Township in 1832. Philip's brother, Aaron Vedder and his wife, Catherine Sutphin, settled at North Lake, Lyndon Township, Washtenaw County, at about the same time.

In this his second book about the Vedders, Mr. Vedder has collected many Vedder and Vadar families which he has found across the county. This edition lacks direct information on his sources other than to indicate he has had much help both from family members and others. Much of the early history comes from published sources which he lists on page 476.

Harmen Albertse Vedder was the first settler in this country, having come before 1657 and possibly as early as 1633. Although information on Harmen is quite complete, little is known of his wife. Mr. Vedder uses the numbering code which lists the generation and then sequentially within each generation. Harmen Albertse Vedder is 1-1, and his 6 children are then 2-1 through 2-6. It is not too difficult to trace one's lines backward using this system.

My connection to this book is with the marriage of Sarah Vedder, 6-417, to William Burkhart. Sarah is the daughter of Aaron H. Vedder, 5-210, and Catherine Sutphin. As we step back to Aaron's generation, his name changes to Arent, which is the old Dutch spelling. I was able to trace this line back to Harmen Albertse Vedder easily.

I have done extensive research on the family of John and Jane Glenn Burkhart, as they are my third great-grandparents. William is their second son, born in 1817 in New York. They came to North Lake along with the Glenns. William Burkhart and Sarah Vedder had only two children that we know of, Francis A. Burkhart (1841-1913) and Aaron Burkhart (1846-1916). I have further information on this family and a correspondence file with descendants. I am sending all of my information to Mr. Vedder as his book incorrectly lists four children: Francis A., Lucy, who is Lucy Vickery, 1st wife of Francis A. Burkhart, Aaron, and Sarah A., who is the daughter of Francis A. Burkhart. I have also found some information on Aaron Vedder, 5-210, which may help find his death date.

I have found the small articles on each person very informative and I believe Mr. Vedder made an attempt to investigate each line as best he could. Mr. Vedder has collected "Vedders wherever found and tried to connect them to the main family." It would appear that at least as a beginning source, this book could prove very helpful. The three indexes; Vedder Given Names, Vader Given Names and Coordinate Families are helpful, especially the last since there are so many with the same given name in each Vedder and Vadar section.

NATURALIZATIONS FOUND IN COUNTY COURT JOURNAL, WASHTENAW COUNTY, MICHIGAN, 1847-1850

Abstracted by Nancy H. Krohn

In 1846 county courts were established in Michigan in lieu of the district courts which were then abolished. In 1850 these county courts were once more abolished. Two Journals of these courts in Washtenaw survive. One book with intact spine is labeled County Court Journal B. The records below are taken from a book without a spine, but which may be considered to be County Court Journal A. There are 471 pencilled pages and the first page, dated 1 March 1847, is inscribed Charles M. Lane, County Judge, Cassius Swift, Clerk, and J.M Wilcoxson, Deputy Clerk. The last page is dated 1 April 1851 and signed E. Lawrence, County Judge. This book was published in Detroit by G.F. Rood & Co.

Only the first name below is found in a naturalization index volume housed at the State Archives, Lansing, Michigan. As this name is recorded as being in "old book 5," the records below are listed as volume 5. The spelling of names in this volume is particularly irregular.
